Iwas destined for a life of medical drama from day one," begins this comic memoir with a mission. "I was born in the month of July, and my horoscope sign is a disease (Cancer). The symbol for Cancer? A crab (the sexually transmitted critter). Not only that, my parents named me Shawn Timothy Decker, which makes my initials S.T.D. Shawn Decker isn't quite the All-American boy. Sure, he gets caught shoplifting copies of Penthouse; is crazy about pro wrestling, especially "The Nature Boy" Ric Flair; and never has a problem getting dates. But he's also a hemophiliac who discovers, at age eleven, that he has contracted HIV from tainted blood products. Instead of becoming self-pitying and dying (as first predicted), Shawn develops a twisted sense of humor, meets Depeche Mode through the Make-A-Wish Foundation, and writes on blogs and in Poz magazine about what it's like being hetero and HIV-positive in rural Virginia. He also turns to gay men for advice on dating women and, almost twenty years after getting HIV, marries Gwenn Barringer, who is HIV-negative and a former competitor for the title of Miss Virginia. Together Shawn and Gwenn travel the country, speaking to high school and college kids about how to live and love with HIV (and how to avoid getting it).

Death and Dying in Children's and Young People's Literature - Marian S. Pyles 1988

A boy, age four, could not understand what had happened to a little girl in his nursery school. His mother explained that Angie had died and had been buried in the earth. Later, she found him and his playmates digging in the backyard, trying to find Angie so that we can play with her. Books can be a valuable resource in helping a young person understand. Fortunately, in much of the literature for children--folklore, the classics, modern works--there is an abundance of tasteful, truthful, and artistic material. This book discusses death in general, adult and child responses to it, its treatment in folklore (nursery rhymes, etc.), and the classics of children's literature and books currently available in public and school libraries. For younger and older children: the death of a pet, a friend, a relative, and one's own death.

Bergson, Eliot, and American Literature - Paul Douglass 1986

Until now, Bergson's widely acknowledged impact on American literature has never been comprehensively mapped. Author Paul Douglass explains and evaluates Bergson's meaning for American writers, beginning with Eliot and moving through Ransom, Penn Warren, and Tate to Faulkner, Wallace Stevens, Henry Miller, William Carlos Williams, and others. It will be a standard point of reference. Bergson was the continental philosopher of the early 1900s, a celebrity, as Sartre would later be. Profoundly influential throughout Europe, and widely discussed in England and America in the Teens, Twenties, and Thirties, Bergson is now rarely read. His current "obsolescence," Douglass argues, illuminates the Western shift from Modern to post-Modern. Ambitious in scope, this book remains admirably close to Bergson himself: what he said, where that fits in the historical context of philosophy, why his ideas moved across the Atlantic, and how he affected American writers. At the book's heart are readings of Eliot's criticism and poetry, analyses of Faulkner's The Sound and the Fury and Light in August, and evaluations of Ransom's, Tate's and Penn Warren's criticism. This impressively researched and beautifully written study will remain of lasting value to students of American literature.

Edible Insects - Arnold van Huis 2013

Edible insects have always been a part of human diets, but in some societies there remains a degree of disdain and disgust for their consumption. Although the majority of consumed insects are gathered in forest habitats, mass-rearing systems are being developed in many countries. Insects offer a significant opportunity to merge traditional knowledge and modern science to improve human food security worldwide. This publication describes the contribution of insects to food security and examines future prospects for raising insects at a commercial scale to improve food and feed production, diversify diets, and support livelihoods in both developing and developed countries. It shows the many traditional and potential new uses of insects for direct human consumption and the opportunities for and constraints to farming them for food and feed. It examines the body of research on issues such as insect nutrition and food safety, the use of insects as animal feed, and the processing and preservation of insects and their products. It highlights the need to develop a regulatory framework to govern the use of insects for food security. And it presents case studies and examples from around the world. Edible insects are a promising alternative to the conventional production of meat, either for direct human consumption or for indirect use as feedstock. To fully realise this potential, much work needs to be done by a wide range of stakeholders. This publication will boost awareness of the many valuable roles that insects play in sustaining nature and human life, and it will stimulate debate on the expansion of the use of insects as food and feed.

What Happens to You When You Have Lost a Pet - Michael F. Conrad 2016-08-19

Read this if you have lost or are about to lose a family pet. Your grieving is real, your loss painful, your feelings genuine. Be comforted! One of those things we would rather not think about is the loss of a pet. Like the loss of a mother or father, brother or sister, a pet is family too. Sometimes, we have deeper feelings about our pet than we do our own kin. Is it bad? I don't know. Our feelings are real and should be taken seriously. These gentle, reflective thoughts look at the death of a beloved animal in terms of reflections on your own spiritual life. How we deal with our pets sometimes tells a lot about our human values, and what our true feelings are. When a pet dies, we grieve. We sense a loss of companionship that we may not experience with family members, who may live in different parts of the country. Pets remind us of our purpose as stewards of the life around us. The care and feeding of our animal companion is bound up inexorably with our nature and our destiny to be with God in Heaven. This book shows how you can put the death of your pet in a spiritual perspective. Only humans go to Heaven. Why is that? Learn how you can take all of your animals, indeed all your most treasured experiences, to Heaven with you. The care and nurturing of an animal companion can be an occasion of Grace and Peace! Read the Song of the Three Young Men in Daniel 3:51-75. Pets are on earth to fulfill their nature. You fulfill your nature as a human being by seeking the Kingdom of Heaven. Pets help us do that. You are a facilitator and a steward of all life. If you are the one who will allow your pet to go to Heaven, you had better make sure you make it there, too.
