Financing Part H Services - Richard M. Clifford 1993

Four years after passage of Public Law 99-457, a survey was conducted of 30 state Part h Coordinators regarding the financing of Part h services. Coordinators were asked to estimate the percentage of the state's total funding that came from each of 44 potential sources for financing the implementation of Part H. Every one of the 44 sources was used by at least one state for at least 1 percent of its Part h system costs. States reported using, on the average, about 21 different sources of funding. Most sources were federal, in both the education area and health and human resources areas. Over half of the dollars used to fund the Part h system were federal, about one-third were state/local, and the remaining tenth were nongovernmental. As the number of people involved in the development and implementation of the Part h finance system increased, the total number of sources used increased and the number of sources used moderately to heavily decreased. States reported expectations that funding would increase from Medicaid; Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment programs; and Chapter 1/Handicapped programs. Most states centered responsibility for coordination of financing services at the state, rather than regional or local level, and relied on formal interagency agreements to facilitate the process. Two appendixes provide background statistical data. (Contains 30 references.) (Jdd).

Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States - National Research Council 2009-07-29

Scores of talented and dedicated people serve the forensic science community, performing vitally important work. However, they are often constrained by lack of adequate resources, sound policies, and national support. It is clear that change and advancements, both systematic and scientific, are needed in a number of forensic science disciplines to ensure the reliability of work, establish enforceable standards, and promote best practices with consistent application. Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States: A Path Forward provides a detailed plan for addressing these needs and suggests the creation of a new government entity, the National Institute of Forensic Science, to establish and enforce standards within the forensic science community. The benefits of improving and regulating the forensic science disciplines are clear: assisting law enforcement officials, enhancing homeland security, and reducing the risk of wrongful conviction and exoneration. Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States gives a full account of what is needed to advance the forensic science disciplines, including upgrading of systems and organizational structures, better training, widespread adoption of uniform and enforceable best practices, and mandatory certification and accreditation programs. While this book provides an essential call-to-action for congress and policy makers, it also serves as a vital tool for law enforcement agencies, criminal prosecutors and attorneys, and forensic science educators.
