Debt-for-Development Exchanges - Ross P. Buckley
2011-04-25

Debt-for-development exchanges are an important financing tool for development. They make debt relief more politically and practically attractive to donor countries and serve the development of recipient countries through the cancellation of external debt and the funding of important development projects. This book commences by chronicling the emergence of debt-for-development exchanges from their forebears, debt-equity exchanges, and analyzes why debt for development suffers from very few of the problems that plagued debt equity. The book analyzes the different types of debt-for-development exchanges and the different ways they have been used by all donor nations that have made use of them. The book then explores a range of critical perspectives on exchanges and concludes by considering a wide range of new and innovative uses for the funds generated by exchanges.

Developing Advanced English Language Competence - Armin Berger 2022-02-03

This volume presents a systematic approach to developing advanced English language competence at tertiary level. It includes the reflections of experienced language teachers and teacher-researchers in the English Language Competence programme at the University of Vienna and provides examples of good practice, amalgamating teaching expertise and research with aspects of curriculum design and programme management. The book addresses a growing academic and professional interest in understanding advanced language learning and use. To date, research has tended to investigate advanced proficiency from a specific theoretical viewpoint, for example cognition, psycholinguistic processing strategies, or the assumption of a critical period or the age factor. In contrast, this work examines advanced proficiency from a curricular and instructional perspective by providing a profile of advanced-level language development in a specific institutional context. It brings together three areas of language education: curriculum design, pedagogical practice, and research. Within this triangle, advanced English language education is the focus or, conversely, advanced English language education provides the lens through which links between curriculum design, teaching, and research can be established.

Mother of the Year - Jen Peters 2009

Jen Peters and Ginger Highland, a couple of real-life moms, share 76 stories from mother, fathers and grandparents who've survived embarrassing potty moments, rad trips gone bad, school mishaps, bedroom blunders and other parenting situations. They introduce the book by pointing out that as new parents attempt to navigate through the ups and downs of parenthood, they sometimes find themselves saying and doing things they never thought they would. Instead of laughing at those mistakes, many then assume they have failed as parents and think their children are destined for therapy. "Years ago," Jen and Ginger say, "we realized how healthy and hilarious it was to discuss our stories with our friends. Tears turned into laughter and we felt normal again. Our [i] Mother of the Year[/i] writing adventure began."

Standards of English in Higher Education - Neil Murray 2015-10-22

The student demographic of universities today has changed quite dramatically from even a decade ago. As universities seek to internationalise, widen participation and derive attendant reputational and financial benefits, along with greater opportunities for research collaborations and industry links, they also face a growing challenge associated with what Neil Murray terms 'the English language question'. In particular, as the proportion of students of non-English speaking backgrounds entering universities increases, there is growing concern over levels of language proficiency and what this can mean for educational standards, the student experience and, ultimately, institutional standing. Standards of English in Higher Education unpacks a number of key and interrelated issues - for example, the assessment of proficiency and the structure and nature of provision - that bear on the question of English language standards, and in doing so offers a frank and critical appraisal of English language in higher education today.
