Meridian Therapy in Chinese

Acupuncture - Henry C. Lu

2013-03-19

Meridian therapy is to treat the symptoms and syndromes of meridians by the points on the meridians involved, and the selection of treatment points is based upon the distribution and inter-relationships of meridians. Syndromes of meridians form the major contents of meridian therapy, among which are the syndromes of twelve master meridians, the eight meridian syndromes, and the linking meridian syndromes. When the symptom of a meridian involves only one meridian, the points on that meridian may be selected for treatment. When the symptom involves two or more meridians, the points on those meridians may be selected for treatment. When the points on two or more different meridians are to be selected for treatment, the points on the deep-superficial meridians, the points on the hand-foot meridians, and the points on the connecting meridians may be selected. When the symptom under treatment involves two or more internal organs, it may be treated by the meeting-points of meridians. There are close to 100 meeting-points of meridians, some of them are meeting-points of two meridians while others of them are meeting-points of three or four meridians.

energetics is a method of diagnosing which aspects of qi are out of balance. Energetics in Acupuncture provides a straightforward diagnostic method of identifying which aspects of the qi are out of balance and therefore what acupuncture treatment is required. One symptom can be caused by many different imbalances of organs and it is essential for the therapist to correctly diagnose the problem before commencing treatment. Once the correct diagnosis is made, the relevant points can be treated with appropriate techniques. The book takes a logical approach to diagnosis and provides relevant lines of questioning and reasoning.

Acupuncture Meridians and Acupuncture Points - Dr. Paul H. Rhyu 2010-10-21

During the recent times, there occurred a tremendous phenomenon in the field of Science. It is the growing awareness of the importance of Oriental Medicine, notably the so called acupuncture, in America, Europe and countries all over the world. Acupuncture, as a field of medicine, poses a fundamental problem. It embraces a lot of complexities which must first have a thorough knowledge of meridians and acupuncture points. Moreover, there is a need for them to have a complete understanding of all the acupuncture parts in the human body. These can not be acquired, however, in just a day's time. Like any other field of specialization, it demands a continuous practice of learning and relearning. In this connection, I am publishing a book which will serve as a guide for medical students and doctors pursuing further studies in acupuncture. The entitle "Acupuncture Meridians and Acupuncture Points" possesses distinct characteristics for easy reading and understanding. "Acupuncture Meridians and Acupuncture Points" indicates the exact position of these points. They are located in various parts of the human body; namely, bone surfaces, muscles, blood vessels and nerves. To aid readers in understanding better these points, the authors intentionally uses meridian classification, point's names and symptoms

Korean and Chinese characters are also used for more depth. The findings presented in this study, however, should not be deemed by readers as conclusive and absolute. Like any study, it assumes fallibility. In consonance to this, the author seeks your advice by writing to them so that a revision may be undertaken. The author, I present any contribution it can be given to the people of today will be my honor and pressure. I like to express my thanks to wife JiHye, daughter Sandy, son Alex, and all family folks for help and support.

Chinese Acupuncture Therapy by Specifically Designated Points
- Henry C. Lu 2013-07

Some acupuncture points on the fourteen major meridians have their unique functions; they are singled out to be named "Specifically Designated Points." A total of 224 specifically designated points are mentioned in this book. 1. The five command points are closest to the tips of the four extremities. 2. The source points are the points where the original energy passes through or comes to a stop. 3. The fifteen Linking points are the points that link together the superficial and deep regions. 4. The Back points are the points on the back at which the energy streams of the viscera, the bowels, and the meridians enter into the posterior region of the body. 5. The Front points refer to the points in the thoracic and abdominal regions where the energy of meridians and that of the viscera and bowels gather together. 6. The sixteen Cleft points are the fissures where the energy of meridians turns and gathers together. 7. The eight Meeting points are the points where the energy of two meridians meet together because those two meridians come across each other somewhere in the trunk and other regions. 8. The eight focus points refer to the focus points of viscera, bowels, energy, blood, the focus point of tendons, blood vessels, bones, and marrow. 9. There are approximately 102 meeting points of meridians.

Meridians and Stable Water Clusters - Shui Yin Lo 2013-01-24

With thousands of years history and your own experience in using or benefiting from meridian-based medical practices, you may not feel that you need physical proof of the existence of meridian lines and points.

However, it is the lack of visual proof that has kept the Western health community, including the insurance companies, from fully accepting the practices of the East like acupuncture and acupressure. Those who understand meridian theory know that it is not just the ability to help heal that is important in Eastern practice, but the focus on health maintenance through maintaining the flow of energy throughout the body. There are many people trying to establish the proof of meridian theory and this book contributes to this goal by presenting a sample of the work of Dr. Shui Yin Lo, who uses infrared photography in his research and has discovered its ability to reveal easily the 14 major meridians in Eastern meridian theory. We all know that we need a more efficient and cost effect approach to medical care and this book will provide a major steppingstone towards that goal.

WHO Standard Acupuncture Point Locations in the Western

Pacific Region - 2008-06-05

Acupuncture has been practiced for more than 2500 years in the Western Pacific region and has become a global therapeutic method in recent decades.

However, it was reported that acupuncturists differed by up to 25% in the acupuncture points they used, raising doubts and uncertainty regarding the efficacy and safety of acupuncture treatment, as well as causing difficulties in the fields of acupuncture research and education. Member States therefore increasingly began to demand standardization in acupuncture point locations. Responding to this request, the WHO Western Pacific Regional Office initiated a project to reach consensus on acupuncture point locations and thus convened 11 serial meetings resulting in these guidelines. This Standard acupuncture point locations in the Western Pacific Region stipulates the methodology for locating acupuncture points on the surface of the human body, as well as the locations of 361 acupuncture points. The Standard is applicable for teaching, research, clinical service, publication, and academic exchanges involving acupuncture.
